

Jeff Wilson is a writer and a technology executive. His wife, children, and employers believe he is an eight-year-old trapped in a grown man's body, shameless in his pursuit of humour. Even when writing about important stuff — Canadian identity, culture, and history, love, loss, and the importance of music — there is always a cupped hand under his armpit. The Castor's Choice is his debut novel. He resides in Toronto, Ontario.